DREADFUL KILLINGS AT CRAB ORCHARD

Deputy Town Marshal Lige Hoskins
Kills Walter Wallin and Is Himself
Shot by Jake Wallin

Crab Orchard was the scene of a double killing on Saturday night just before Christmas which cast a feeling of sadness and sorrow over all who heard of it during what should prove the happiest season of the year.

Walter Wallin, one of the best known farmers in the East End, and Elijah Hoskins, deputy marshal of Crab Orchard, are the two men who lost their lives in the unfortunate affair. Wallin was shot thru' the heart by Hoskins and died almost instantly, and a few minutes later Jake Wallin pumped four bullets into Hoskins, wounding him so severely that he died a few hours later. Jake Wallin and his nephew, young Ernest Wallin, a son of Dad Wallin, were arrested, charged with murder. County Judge Bailey appointed Deputy Sheriff W. S. Embrey as a guard for them until their examining trial can be held Thursday. Judge J. W. Alcorn and his son, K. S. Alcorn are the attorneys who will defend them.

Reports concerning the affair vary, and the true facts will probably not be known until the testimony of all the eye witnesses is in at the examining trial.

Not until Sheriff W. L. McCarty and Coroner George P. Wright went up to Crab Orchard Sunday morning to make an investigation and hold an inquest were the details learned here concerning the fearful affair. According to the information gathered by Sheriff McCarty, the shooting affray Saturday night had its beginning one day last week when John Riddle, proprietor of a soft drink stand at Crab Orchard, had some slight trouble with one of the Wallin men. It is said that Riddle drew his gun on Wallin, who was unarmed at the time and gave him some stiff talk. The next day Wallin is said to have returned to town ready for business, and this time he got the drop on Riddle and made him eat his words of the day before.

Sheriff McCarty was told that on Saturday the next day, quite a number of both the Wallin and Riddle families came to town armed and ready for trouble. It seemed that news of the little difficulty between Wallin and Riddle had become generally known among their friends and kinsmen, and each side was determined not to have to take anything from the other.

When he saw how things were going Saturday, Dad Wallin, who lives in the Cedar Creek section and is one of the most respected and best known members of that family, being the oldest of the eight brothers, went to John Riddle and had a little quiet talk with him. Mr. Wallin and Riddle had always been good friends. He told Riddle that he regretted that affairs had come to the pass that they had; and then asked him as a friend to go home and stay there until Sunday morning. Mr. Wallin is said to have told Riddle that his brothers were in town mad and drinking and he was unable to control them and he believed that the best way to avoid trouble would be for Riddle to go home and stay there for the remainder of the day. Riddle at first demurred, it is said, on the ground that he could not afford to leave his business, but Mr. Wallin finally convinced him that it was the sensible thing to do and he went, promising Mr. Wallin that he would not come out any more that day.

Later in the day while Riddle was still at home, Walter Wallin, with whom Mr. Riddle is said to have had the first trouble, went to Riddle's house and tried to get him out, but Mr. Riddle is said to have written him a note, telling him of the promise made Dad Wallin and refusing to come out for trouble.

Towards evening Dad Wallin, Walter Wallin, young Ernest Wallin a son of Dad Wallin and several other men were in Riddle's place, and were in front of the bar when Deputy Marshal Hoskins went in. Dad Wallin is said to have remarked to him:

"It looks like you have been following us around all day."

To this Hoskins is said to have replied that such had not been his intention.

Mr. Wallin is then said to have asked Hoskins if he was a policeman, and when Hoskins admitted that he was, Mr. Wallin is said to have told him to take his hand out of his pocket, if he did not want to arrest him.

Hoskins is alleged to have answered that he saw no particular reason compelling him to take his hand out of his pocket. Then it is said that Walter Wallin drew his gun and told Hoskins that if he did not do so, he would kill him. Hoskins, in his dying statement is said to have declared that thereupon Walter Wallin fired one shot at him, striking him in the leg. Hoskins immediately came out with his own pistol and shot Walter Wallin thru' the heart, killing him almost instantly. He then fired four times more, emptying his pistol. The first shot however, had caused the lights to go out, and in the firing in the darkness, Dad Wallin caught bullet in a leg, a bullet grazed the top of Ernest Wallin's head and Ben Howard, a bystander was also wounded in the thigh.

As Hoskins backed out the door, young Ernest Wallin, a boy about 18 years old, threw himself on him and tried to trip him up, it seemed to those who saw it.

Just at that moment, Jake Wallin another brother of Dad and Walter, who had been across the street near the Campbell & Pettus drug store, came running up at the sound of the shooting. He asked a man what was happening inside, but the man was unable to tell him. He then saw Hoskins coming out the door with young Ernest Wallin grappling with him, and Hoskins trying to beat him off, and running up to Hoskins, he emptied his pistol into him. Hoskins falling to the ground mortally wounded.

This is the story of the killings as told to Sheriff McCarty when he went to Crab Orchard to arrest Jake Wallin. As Hoskins did not die until Sunday morning, Wallin was released under $1,000 bond. When Hoskins died, however, a will charging murder, was sworn out, and after the funeral of his brother, he was brought to Stanford by Sheriff McCarty, arriving early Tuesday morning. Judge Bailey fixed Thursday for the examining trial. Elbert Wallin, another brother, who is a detective on the O. & C. railroad, and Arthur Wallin, who now lives in Ohio, but had come back to his old home to spend Christmas, came down with the prisoner, as did also a number of his nephews. Ernest Wallin was also brought down as a prisoner, but it is believed that the charge against him will be speedily dismissed, as he had no hand in the killing.

Friends of Wallin say that he will make a strong defense in his examining trial, and it is expected his attorneys will endeavor to secure his release at that time. It is reported that he will plead that in firing upon Hoskins, he simply did so in defense of his nephew, Ernest Wallin, who, he will allege, was being beaten over the head by Hoskins with the butt of his pistol.

The deaths of both Walter Wallin and Hoskins came as severe blows to their families. Wallin is survived by his wife and two children, his wife having been a daughter of former Squire J. T. Roberts, of the Hubbell section. Mrs. Wallin was prostrated, and is in a serious condition. The aged mother of Mr. Wallin is also in a serious condition as a result of the great shock.

The death of Mr. Hoskins is a great loss to his family, as his wife and six children were dependent upon him. Both of the dead men were about 40 years of age. The Wallins have lived in Lincoln county from early days but Hoskins is said to have removed here not many years ago from Bell county.

COURT MARTIAL FOR CASWELL SAUFLEY.

But Stanford Boy In Navy Is In
The Right And Will "Show Up"
His Accusers At Trial.

A dispatch from Washington in Sunday's papers told of the arrest of Ensign R. Caswell Saufley, a son of the late Judge M. C. Saufley, of this city. The many friends of this popular Stanford boy were satisfied he was in the right and this dispatch in Wednesday's Concord-Journal seems to prove it:

Washington, Dec. 26.—The court martial of Ensign Richard C. Saufley, of Kentucky to begin at Norfolk to-day, may develop into more trouble for the Navy Department and for Commandant Patton, of the Norfolk yard, than for Saufley. At least, this view is taken by friends of Saufley, who tell a story of superiors risking men's lives in unseaworthy ships and enforcing private grudges. These facts, they say will come out during the trial.

According to his friends, Saufley will be absolutely exonerated by the court-martial, but Commandant Patton is likely to be reprimanded for ordering out the torpedo boat Riddle for night trip through Hampton Roads.

Senator Bradley, who has been active in the matter, told this story of Saufley's troubles with the Commandant to-day, based, he believes, on accurate information:

Saufley was ordered off the Kansas, on which he had been stationed ever since his graduation, to take command of the Riddle, not the Barry, then laid up at Charleston, S. C. She was one of a number of debilitated boats of her kind, which has been beached by a typhoon, and had a bad name for unsavoriness in the navy. Up to the time he went aboard her, Saufley had an excellent record.

He was ordered to take her to Norfolk, which, without delay, although he knew her condition, and amid many perils, he accomplished. In her he made several trips from Norfolk to Annapolis and finally he took her to the New York review and back, a rough journey, in which he nearly lost the boat and all concerned, owing to her condition.

Her navigation instruments were destroyed; there were seisms in her just above the water line, and she carried water in her hold. Still he made no formal protest in his command.

"Several days ago Saufley was ordered to take the Riddle to Cape Henry, with supplies for a wrecked collier. He did so. But her condition grew so constantly worse that Saufley began to fear that she could make few more trips. He told his superior officer about her.

What must have been his surprise when he received orders to sail with her that day again to Cape Henry, despite the fact that he had reported her unsavory?

He prepared to do so. He was told, at 1 o'clock that he was to sail in about an hour. Sudown came and no order to embark. When it was growing dark he was given the word to go. He felt that to go through the dark seas on the Riddle would be a grave peril that might result in the loss of the boat and his crew, for whom, as Commander, he was personally responsible. So he telephoned the commandant and told him that if he still insisted on the order he (Saufley) would take her out alone, but under protest.

Terms made known on day of sale.

that his dignity had been offended by Saufley, because the latter used the telephone in making his protest, instead of coming in person. It was also said that the independence of the young Kentuckian, contrasted with kowtowing to the commandant on the part of other ensigns had offended Patton.

HOUSE BURNS DOWN.

Residence Occupied By E. B. Glasscock Catches From Flue.

Catching fire from the kitchen chimney, the small cottage owned by Tom Peene, and occupied by Mr. and Mrs. E. B. Glasscock on Hustonville street, burned down last Thursday night. The alarm was given about 12 o'clock. Mr. and Mrs. Glasscock were awakened by smoke in their sleeping room and managed to get out safely and save most of their furniture. The house was valued at about $800 or $1,000, and was insured for $250 with J. D. Weare. The fire laddies turned out quickly, but the flames had spread so fast there was no chance to save the building.

And W. P. Kincaid Is Still Buying
For His Louisville House—
Some Recent Purchases

Almost $200,000 has been distributed in Lincoln county within the past few weeks by W. P. Kincaid, who buys tobacco for the Louisville Tobacco Warehouse Company. Mr. Kincaid has bought so far this season over 1,500,000 pounds of the weed and he has not finished by a considerable amount. He has orders to keep on buying, and as he is paying what are considered very fair prices for the right colored tobacco, he will turn loose a considerably larger amount of coin in this section before he is through this season.

Some of the principal purchases of tobacco made by Mr. Kincaid in Lincoln are as follows:

Goods & Manning 6,000 lbs at 10c
D. L. Mason 7,000 lbs at 13c.

WHAT SAVED HER LIFE

Mrs. Martin Tells About a Painful Experience that Might Have Ended Seriously.

Riverville, W. Va.—Mrs. Dora Martin, in a letter from Riverville, writes:

"For three years, I suffered with many troubles, and had pains in my back and side. I was nervous and could not sleep at night.

The doctor could not help me. He said I would have to be operated on before I could get better. I thought I would try using Cardul.

Now, I am entirely well.

I am sure Cardul saved my life. I will never be without Cardul in my home. I recommend it to my friends."

For fifty years, Cardul has been relieving pain and distress caused by many trouble. It will surely help you.

It goes to the spot—reaches the trouble—relieves the symptoms, and drives away the cause.

Kinney, Rufus Lippé, James Yowell,

W. A. Coffey and other citizens,

residents and voters in Lincoln county

Kentucky, and moved the court to continue the hearing of this case,

until Thursday December 14th, 1911

in order that the above persons and others opposed to the holding of said election, may have an opportunity to examine the list of petitioners filed herein, to the end that all persons signing said petition, who are not legal voters, and whose names are improperly signed and appear thereon may be strucken therefrom,

and they state and are advised that said petition do not contain a sufficient number of legal petitioners to authorize this court to call said election, and this motion is made in good faith and not for purposes of delay. They state that said petition was only filed on Friday December 8, 1911 and they have
